<ul> <li>Create a telephone list. Favourites at the top</li> <li>Connect with people at the bottom of your list first</li> <li>Building relationships is the most important thing you'll ever do, and it requires action and communication</li> <li>If the relationship is going well, they will be more loyal and forgiving when things go wrong.</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Focus on the right problems</li> <li>69% of problems are irresolvable and only 31% are solvable</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Collaborative intention</li> <li>Take a risk and state your intention early in a meeting: "I want to work with you openly and collaboratively"</li> <li>Then tease out their issues and concerns</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>4 Stay in the blue zone</li> <li>Be open and committed to collaboration, problem-solving and negotiation</li> <li>Forgive quickly and respond positively, when there's a chance to collaborate</li> <li>Avoid subtle or direct competition</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>5. Reveal something about yourself</li> <li>Most of us go around with an armoured layer</li> <li>Appropriate person disclosure encourages others to open up and builds trust</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Diversity of thought</li> <li>Be open, compassionate and curious about what others can bring to the table</li> <li>Suppress the voices of the big egos in the room so the introverts can be heard</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>Z Don't pitch credentials</li> <li>Rather than telling the client how wonderful your agency is, ask them questions and really listen</li> <li>What did they like about their last agency? What will they miss? What would they like done differently?</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Hear what's actually said</li> <li>When getting a brief, repeat the clients' own words back to them to clarify their meaning</li> <li>This helps you understand what the client really wants and not your interpretation of it</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Be self-aware and self-accountable</li> <li>Take responsibility for the choices you make and the consequences; never point the finger or blame</li> <li>Be self-aware and aware of others</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>We are not socialised to tell the truth</li> <li>Be committed to hearing and telling the truth. It will create an environment of openness and a 'safe space'.</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>Give forward-looking feedback</li> <li>What inspires. Excites or moves you?</li> <li>What works?</li> <li>What's missing?</li> <li>What would make it bigger and better?</li> </ul>	<ul> <li>122 Book recommendation</li> <li>Radical Collaboration by James Tamm</li> <li>And TED Talk</li> <li>https://www.ted.com/talks/jim_ta mm_first_step_to_collaboration_d on_t_be_so_defensive</li> </ul>
